Norwegian Veterinary Institute

Advancing animal and human health

Veterinærinstituttet

Emergency preparedness

Knowledge for informed decisions

One Health

From data to knowledge

Emergency preparedness

We will be Norway’s leading centre of expertise in preparing for threats to the health of terrestrial and aquatic animals

We predict, detect and investigate emerging and existing health threats amid global change

We provide leading expertise in diagnostics and analysis to strengthen national preparedness for health threats

We develop methods and generate knowledge to help prevent and reduce the impact of health threats

Veterinærinstituttet

Knowledge for informed decisions

We will be a recognised research institute trusted by public authorities, industry and the wider public

We develop and communicate high-quality scientific knowledge through research, surveillance and diagnostics

We provide transparent, objective and knowledge-based advice

We translate ours and others knowledge to help ensure informed decision-making

Veterinærinstituttet

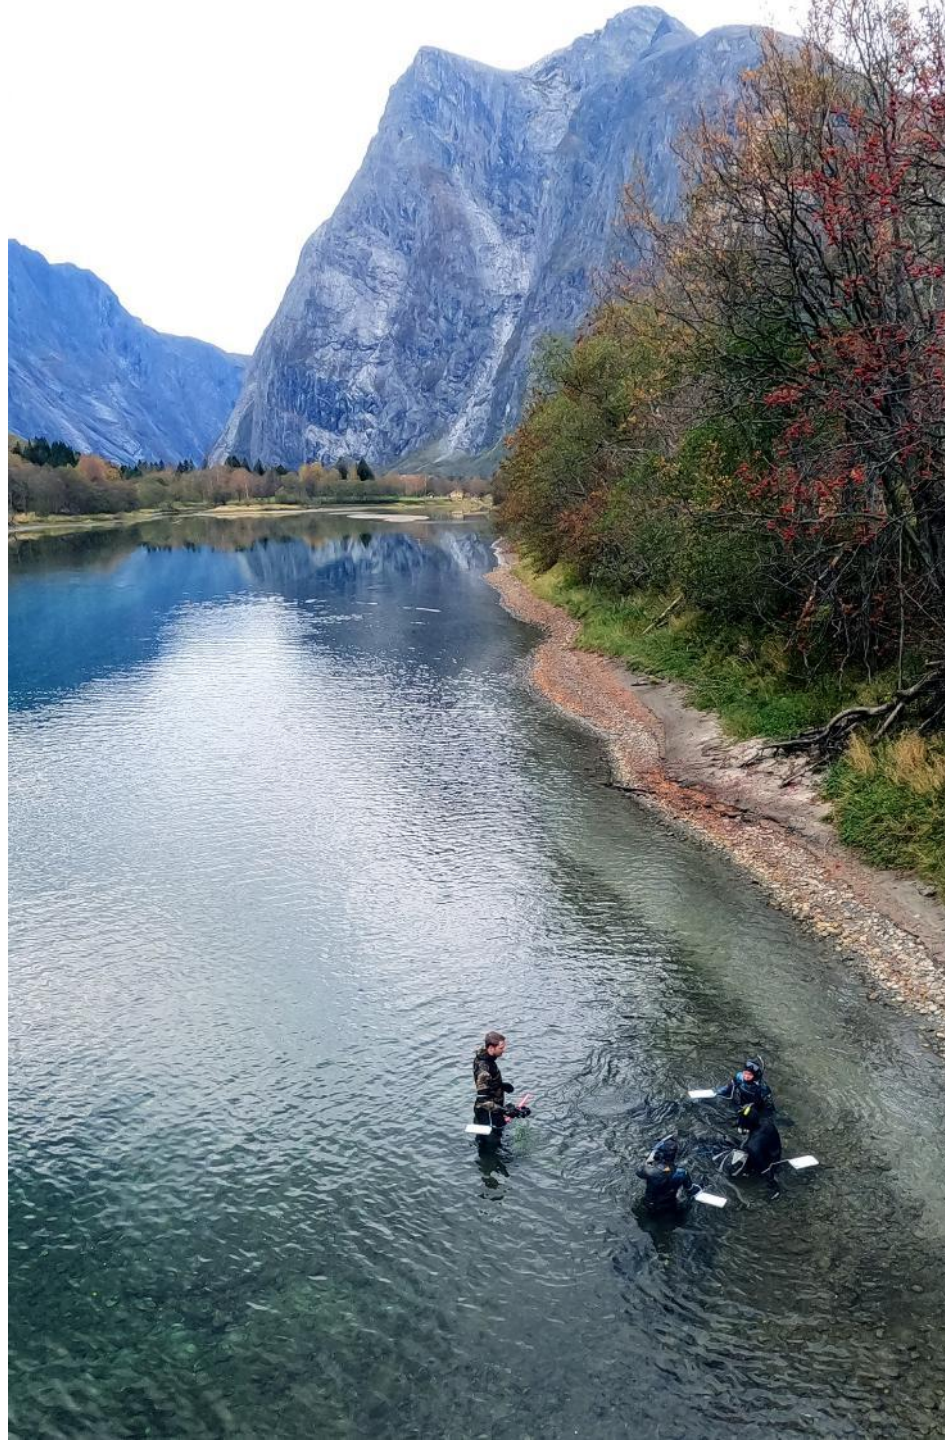

One Health

We will be key contributor and a sought-after partner in efforts to advance One Health

We actively work to link animal health, human health and the environment

We acknowledge diseases, health and welfare as connected in our work

We develop knowledge on how disease agents, hosts and their environments interact

Veterinærinstituttet

From data to knowledge

We will be a digitally advanced knowledge institution developing data into knowledge to strengthen preparedness and support better decisions

We develop data into knowledge through analysis, new methods and digital tools for our research, diagnostics and advisory services

We utilise data and artificial intelligence to strengthen research, diagnostics and the advice we provide

We make data accessible and usable across disciplines and sectors and for our partners

Veterinærinstituttet

One Institute

We will work as one institute, drawing on expertise and resources from across the organisation to deliver on our public mission

We work together and share what we know with others

We have an inclusive working environment, encouraging dedication and room for everyone to contribute and evolve

We work towards shared goals and take collective responsibility for the institute’s performance

Veterinærinstituttet